DEARBORN — While Halloween will be over, your access to ghosts doesn't have to be.

On Tuesday, also known as All Saints Day, the Motor City Ghost Hunters will be presenting at 7 p.m. at Henry Ford Centennial Library, 16301 Michigan Ave.

While Motor City Ghost Hunters is a paranormal investigative group based out of the Metro Detroit area, the group investigates all around Michigan, as well as the country. The team recently returned from a two-night investigation at the light-house and Shipwreck Museum at Whitefish Point, and spent a weekend during the summer at the Villisca Axe Murder House in Iowa. MCGH also has a chapter, MCGH-Carolinas, which operates out of a suburb of Raleigh, N.C.

The team will be presenting some of their best visual and audio evidence, as well as sharing information on proper investigative techniques, available paranormal investigative equipment, and much more.

MCGH investigates both home and commercial locations free of charge, and believe that no one, especially children, should live in fear. They can be visited on the web at www.motorcityghosthunters.com or through Facebook.
